Dear Scott,

When considering the anti-dumping submission by Australian Paper that is Nippon Daishou the following should be considered.

1. This organization almost has a total monopoly in Australia in the area of fine paper and stationery in that it has taken almost every importer, manufacturer and wholesaler over in an effort to force its products on the market.
2. This organization does not make a real 100% post-consumer recycled copy paper but has taken over the importers of this product and stopped the importation.
3. This organization sells some stationery products below the cost of local manufacture.
4. This organization is subject to a local boycott due to its policy of using old growth wood chip, some illegally logged World Heritage Forest and its shocking reputation in relation to sustainability.
5. This organization does not consider it necessary not to pollute and dumps chemical waste into our ocean.
6. The importation of real 100% post-consumer recycled paper manufactured in for example, paper mills in Europe, with a closed loop whitening system with an absolutely minimal carbon footprint should be applauded as such a sustainable product is not made in Australia nor will it be with the current monopoly system of manufacture here. All made from recovered paper with no mill broke or wood chip content.
7. Recently the president of Nippon paper was forced to resign as he took the blame for lying about paper being recycled when it wasn't.

I think that all illegally logged wood chip products should be seized upon importation inclusive of Nippon Paper Daishou products (Australian Paper). (Not Australian at all).
